Gatlin International to present at Online Educa Berlin 2009
A smart model for delivering online education

BERLIN – On Thursday, December 3, 2009, 14:30 to 16:00, Mehdi Tounsi and Gillian Duncan, on behalf of Gatlin International, will present in a session entitled Putting the Web to Work in Class – Practical Tips and New Ideas.

This session will take a look at the extensive Web resources available to educators to take advantage of online opportunities. The session will provide links to new materials and tools available that can help make a difference in all aspects of delivering online education. The Gatlin International segment will focus on A Look at a Smart and Profitable Business Model for Continuing Education Around the World.

“We’ll look at an easy, flexible and cost effective online education model for colleges and universities,” said Duncan, managing director for Gatlin International. “We will also address the many challenges facing colleges and universities, as well as how to localise elearning and leverage an International alliance without adding costs or work load.”

Duncan and Tounsi will be available throughout the conference at stand number C107. Institutions of higher learning or corporations interested in offering quality online career training programmes can contact Gatlin International at info@gatlininternational.com or find more information at www.gatlininternational.co.uk.
